

St Andrews has its first film awards

Flashing cameras, girls in smart dresses, high heels and wearing make up, boys in suits and ties, the smell of popcorn, and the excitement of the audience! This was Year 6, what was going on? Of course it was the first ever Steve's Award Ceremony (a bit like the Oscars but with smaller statues) being held to celebrate the end of the Lights, Camera, Action unit.

For this unit the children created a whole film themselves. In groups they wrote scripts and organised their own costumes, props and scenery. Then came the acting and in some cases singing and dancing which had to be filmed by members of each group. The final editing stage saw a number of scenes cut or re-shot with music added to set the right mood and once that was over the films had to be published, including the creation of publicity posters. The students learned a great deal about cooperation and teamwork as well as the techniques required to write a good script, and the ICT skills needed to make a movie.

The premier screening event was very glamorous and well attended. Afterwards, awards were given for a variety of categories including;

The award for best actor went to Zac for his portrayal of a mixed up teen who becomes more mature when he falls in love in the comedy film "Attitude".

Bam took the best actress award for her horrific role of the ghost which sent shivers down the spines of everyone who watched her.

The best film award went to the horror group for their chilling film "The worst is never over"
